Business Travelers Delight Families With Free Internet Greetings From Egreetings.com

San Francisco, California (February 14, 2000) — Until now, the busy business traveler has had three imperfect choices for communicating back home: a late-night phone call that often gets left on the answering machine, an e-mail message that has all the warmth of a credit report or a mailed card that usually arrives long after the traveler returns home.

But with one of the thousands of greetings from Egreetings.com, travelers can transmit their feelings at the click of a mouse—and for free. “The same characteristics that make e-mail so popular—ease of use, near instantaneous delivery and world-wide acceptance—make it ideal for the exchange of feelings and emotions that are best expressed with online greetings,” said Gordon M. Tucker, Chief Executive Officer of Egreetings Network, Inc.

“For the home-sick road warrior, sending a greeting from Egreetings.com can be a welcome respite from spreadsheets and office reports,” Tucker said. “And for the recipient, a digital greeting with animation, music, beautiful color and laughter is a real day-brightener, a reminder that you may be separated, but you’re not forgotten.”

What a great way to send your kids a personal greeting that they can easily print out and pin on their wall. The techno-savvy kids of this generation will appreciate the fact that you’re in-style, up-to-date, and a super-cool parent.

The simplicity of sending greetings from Egreetings.com is also part of the appeal. “Our greetings are animated and available anytime, anywhere through your laptop with instantaneous delivery,” Tucker said. “Just go to www.Egreetings.com, select from thousands of online greetings, add a personal message and zap it off. It’s easy, it’s fun, it’s thoughtful and it’s efficient.”

The greetings selections at Egreetings.com are being constantly updated, with new offerings for each season, holidays and everyday occasions like birthdays, anniversaries, or just to say, "Hi, I miss you"; and there is no charge for sending an Egreetings.com message. So, next time you find yourself too far away from home—stranded in an airport; up late during a restless night in another hotel; or 30,000 feet in the air—let technology work for you, and send your family a greeting they'll treasure.
